Hattie Baines retires from Community Child Care Center

BY CAROLE ROBINSON
SENIOR STAFF WRITER

Hattie McCullough Baines has been caring for Franklin children at the Community Child Care Center for 45 years. As a group of 4-year-olds at the Center announced before getting their picture taken, on Friday, Dec. 30, "Ms. Hattie will retire."

The Community Child Care Center was one of several programs born from the vision and hard work of a group of women from more than a dozen local churches. They saw the need for services to improve the lives of underprivileged Franklin residents, and they were motivated to do something to address those needs.

In 1971, after a major fundraising effort yielding $30,000, the group had enough funds to get the Child Care Center up and running. Baines was one of the first persons hired to work at the center. That first year, they cared for 25 children ages 3 to 5 years old, in the newly renovated building at 100 Spring St., Baines said.

"I was on the [women's group] board of directors and several board members knew I graduated from Tennessee State University with a degree in education that year so they contacted me," Baines said.

When the center opened, Baines was the lead assistant teacher, but soon moved up to the assistant director's position. She was appointed executive director 30 years ago.

"I do what I do because I love what I do, and it needs to be done," she said. "I'll let the children and their families' outcome speak for itself."

In 1993, the board of directors recognized the need to expand childcare to very young children, Baines said.

At that time the facility the center occupied didn't have space needed for infants and toddlers, but there was a five-bedroom apartment available at 160 Spring St. It was renovated to accommodate the new program.

"We took 25 little ones from infants through age 2 1/2," Baines said. "And we had 73 kids at 100 Spring St. age 3 to 5 year olds. We had almost every kid in the neighborhood."

Two sites meant administrators had to overcome a few issues; the biggest was getting food safely delivered from the original site where the kitchen was located to the new site. The staff came up with a solution that required insulated containers and coolers.

"It was not easy," Baines said. "We had all kinds of insulated bags to keep things hot and cold."

For seven years, the center utilized the two sites caring for area preschool children while parents worked.

In July 2000, the Community Child Care Center moved its entire operation to the Community Services Building on Fowlkes Street, where it remains. Although the state allows the 11,500 square feet of space to serve 142 children, according to Baines, "As long as I'm here, we won't ever have that many. It sounds like a warehouse."

"I like to see children develop and become the best they can – being given the best advantage to achieve," she said. "My belief is if I can get what I need to help them develop, to achieve and to thrive, then I have provided the opportunity for them [to become they best they can]. That's what motivates me with the community and with the parents."

If children are provided a good educational start, they will do better when they enter in school, Baines added.

Baines was the third youngest child of 14. She watched her parents, and later her mother after her father died when she was 10, work very hard to ensure all their children were well educated.

"My mom is my idol," she said. "She was strong, ambitious, a go-getter and a hard worker. She expected a lot out of her kids, and she was the neighborhood mama. She was really a great person."

Baines said guiding children as they become the persons they are meant to be means being observant, and on occasion it also means helping the parents. She recalled one of her toddlers under their care who had brain damage.

"We were able to get him the professional care he needed and medical guidance," she said.

Then there was the preschooler who was reading.

"I stopped to listen to the children reading their books and realized she was actually reading," Baines said. "I had her read to me and then called her mother and asked her, 'Did you know?' [The mother] said she discovered it a couple of days before."

Baines helped the child's mother get her into Pre-K. She eventually skipped a couple of grades in school, Baines said.

Baines has spent her entire after-college career taking care of neighborhood preschoolers. Although she and her husband don't have children of their own, between her large family — who have provided plenty of nieces and nephews and now grand nieces and grand nephews — and the hundreds of children she has taught at the center, her heart is filled with children of all ages.

After 45 years working with children during their early developmental years, Baines said, "It has been very rewarding to see how so many children thrived and went on to bigger and better things. This place has impacted a lot of lives and will continue to impact lives – the foundation is set."

The educator admitted she will miss the staff, the children and the community at large, but then, she "won't be absent."

"She'll be back," said Ruth Leach, Baines' administrative assistant. "She can't stay away."

As far as plans for her retirement, Baines said, "I try not to plan – I like to be spontaneous, but I AM going to take an Alaskan cruise."

And she will often be seen playing with preschoolers.

CAROLE ROBINSON

Hattie Baines talks with a group of four-year-olds at the Community Child Care Center during their snacktime. She will be retiring on Dec. 30 from the job she has held for 30 of the 45 years she has been at the center.

Whitson

Whitson replaces former representative Jeremy Durham, who served the 65th District for two terms and was expelled by the House Legislature Sept. 13 after 22 women accused him of inappropriate sexual advances in a 49-page Attorney General investigative report.

Whitson, who has remained tight-lipped publically about his ex-opponent, explained during the election that he wanted to run a "positive" campaign and wants to bring "integrity" to 65th District representation and "do what's right in the legislature."

Durham, who formed a firm platform of opposing the Affordable Care Act and adamantly resisted the expansion of Medicaid due to fiscal burdens on Tennessee, also supported stricter immigration laws and refugee evaluation processes.

About the current issues, Whitson said that he is encouraged to learn more about House Speaker Beth Harwell's 3-Star health proposal and Gov. Bill Haslam's transportation plan.

Whitson said he supports methods of sustainable funding to improve Tennessee road projects and traffic as well as securing additional funding for schools and supports stricter laws for immigrants who break the law.

"Let's face the traffic problem and schools," Whitson said. "I am a big supporter of first responders and teachers.

"With a supermajority, people expect us to do something positive," Whitson added.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♥	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass

Opening lead — jack of spades.

Assume you're in three notrump and West leads a spade. You count your tricks and find that you have only seven of them. You have the potential of an eighth trick if the hearts divide 3-3, and there is also the chance of securing a diamond finesse for your ninth trick.

But these possibilities, though certainly legitimate, are not as promising as the chance of developing two club tricks by forcing out the A-K. Furthermore, you still have a chance to test your luck in the red suits later on if the need arises.

So you win the spade jack with the queen, cross to the queen of hearts and lead a low club. You hope East will follow low and West will win the trick with the ace or king because, in that case, you'll have nine sure tricks by forcing out the either high club, whatever West returns.

Unfortunately, East goes up with the ace of clubs at trick three and shifts to the jack of diamonds, attacking your principal weak spot. You had hoped this wouldn't happen, which was one reason you led the first club from dummy rather than your hand. However, it has happened.

Your best shot at this point is to play the ace rather than finesse the queen. You refuse the finesse because if East has the diamond king, the contract is no-setting, whatever you do. But if West has the king, as is the actual deal, you could be defeated by a diamond continuation from West after he takes the queen with the king.

You next play a club, and since West has the king, you make the contract. Your queen of diamonds is vulnerable to attack with West on lead, and no matter what he returns, you are certain of at least nine tricks.

Tomorrow: Famous Hand.

Obama, Japan's Abe to seek reconciliation at Pearl Harbor

By JOSH LEDERMAN
Associated Press

HONOLULU — Putting 75 years of resentment behind them, the leaders of the United States and Japan are coming together at Pearl Harbor for a historic pilgrimage to the site where the bloodshed of surprise attacks thrust America into World War II.

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's visit Tuesday with President Barack Obama is powerful proof that the former enemies have transcended the recriminatory impulses that weighed down relations after the war, Japan's government has said. Although Japanese leaders have visited Pearl Harbor before, Abe will be the first to visit the memorial that now rests on the hallowed waters above the sunken USS Arizona.

Last meeting with foreign leader

For Obama, it's likely the last time he will meet with a foreign leader as president. White House aides said. It's a bookend of sorts for the president, who nearly eight years ago invited Abe's predecessor to be the first leader that Obama hosted at the White House.

For Abe, it's an act of symbolic reciprocity, coming six months after Obama became the first sitting U.S. president to visit Hiroshima in Japan, where the U.S. dropped an atomic bomb in hopes of ending the war.

"This visit, and the president's visit to Hiroshima earlier this year, would not have been possible eight years ago," said Daniel Kritenbrink, Obama's top Asia adviser in the White House. "That we are here today is the result of years of efforts at all levels of our governments and societies, which has allowed us to jointly and directly deal with even the most sensitive aspects of our shared history."

A bloody conflict

More than 2,300 Americans died on Dec. 7, 1941, when more than 300 Japanese fighter planes and bombers attacked. More than 1,000 others were wounded. In the ensuing years, the U.S. incarcerated roughly 120,000 Japanese-Americans in internment camps before dropping atomic bombs in 1945 that killed some 140,000 people in Hiroshima and 70,000 in Nagasaki.

Abe will not apologize for Pearl Harbor, his government has said. Nor did Obama apologize at Hiroshima in May, a visit that he and Abe used to emphasize their elusive aspirations for a nuclear-free future.

No apology needed, said 96-year-old Alfred Rodrigues, a U.S. Navy veteran who survived what President Franklin D. Roosevelt called a "date which will live in infamy."

"War is war," Rodrigues said as he looked at old photos of his military service. "They were doing what they were supposed to do, and we were doing what we were supposed to do."

'Just wishful thinking'

After a formal meeting in the morning, Obama and Abe planned to lay a wreath aboard the USS Arizona Memorial, which is accessible only by boat. Then they'll go to nearby Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam, where both leaders will speak.

Obama and Abe signed off on the visit last month when they met in Peru on the sidelines of an economic summit. Though the parallels with Obama's Hiroshima visit are palpable, both governments said that one visit wasn't contingent on the other.

Meanwhile, China criticized Abe's visit as an insincere attempt to absolve Japan of its wartime aggression.

"Trying to liquidate the history of World War II by paying a visit to Pearl Harbor and consoling the dead is just wishful thinking on Japan's part," said Hua Chunying, a Chinese foreign ministry spokeswoman in Beijing, at a regular briefing.

"Japan can never turn this page over without recognition from China and other victimized countries in Asia," she said. "Japanese leaders should stop being so evasive and dodging, and instead take a responsible attitude toward history and future, deeply and sincerely reflect upon the history of aggressive war, and draw a clear break with the past."

Pearl Harbor syndrome

Abe's visit is not without political risk given the Japanese people's long, emotional reckoning with their nation's aggression in the war. Though the history books have largely deemed Pearl Harbor a surprise attack, Japan's government insisted as recently as this month that it had intended to give the U.S. prior notice that it was declaring war and failed only because of "bureaucratic bunghing."

"There's this sense of guilt, if you like among Japanese, this 'Pearl Harbor syndrome,' that we did something very unfair," said Tamaki Tsukada, a minister in the Embassy of Japan in Washington. "I think the prime minister's visit will in a sense absolve that kind of complex that Japanese people have."
