Petition seeks support for Fairview skatepark

NANCY STEPHENS

nstephens@mainstreetmediatn.com

One local resident has started an on-line petition asking Fairview to support the construction of a skate park. The petition to Fairview’s mayor, started by Charley Stubbs, states, “Many kids and adults love skating, scootering, biking, etc. Having a skatepark in Fairview could bring us together as a community while doing something that many people love to do.”

Over 300 people signed the petition in the first week, and the support is currently nearing 400 after only a little promotion.

Fairview Mayor Debby Rainey responded to a social media post about the petition, stating, “Instead of signing an online petition that commissioners may or may not see, do the research. How many people living inside the city limits of Fairview would truly be interested in this type of venue? How do other cities handle their venues, what would be estimated costs? What have been problems? How could those be addressed? Then get on the agenda to come and speak to the BOC.”

One skatepark supporter suggested the petition is the first step and a way to provide an idea of how many local residents are interested in adding a skate park to the city’s park system.

The petition can be found at <https://sign.moveon.org/petitions/skatepark-in-fairview-tennessee>.

EDITOR’S NOTE: The following ar-

Would a skatepark be good for Fairview?

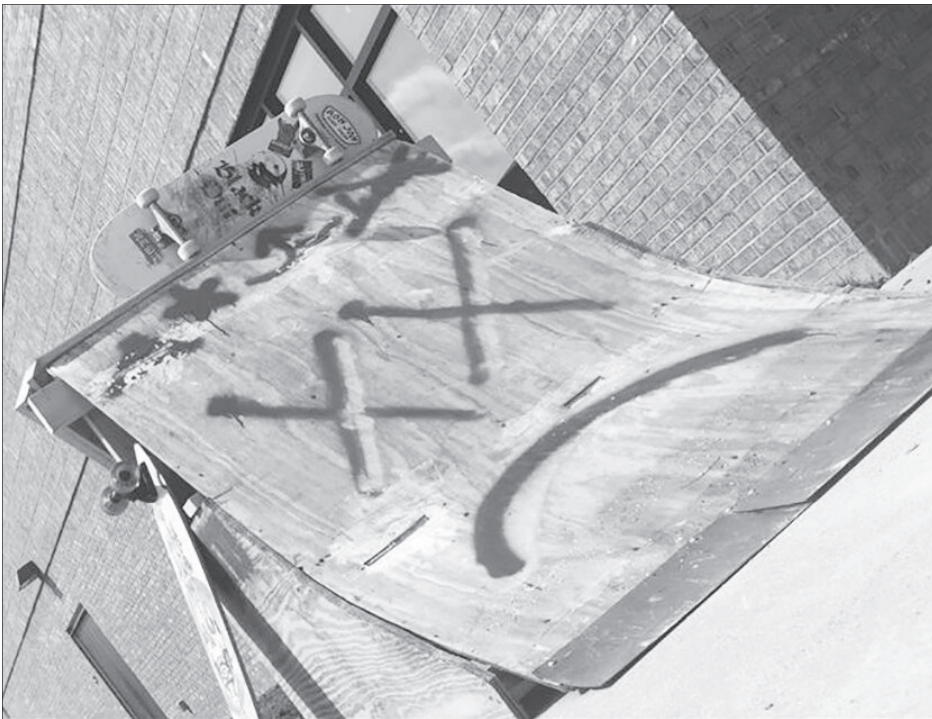

By Apryl Johnson
FHS’ The Swarm

Imagine, it’s a Saturday night and you have nothing to do. You could go hangout at Sonic or Dirt Cheap like you do every weekend, but what if there was something else for teenagers to do in Fairview? What if, there was a skatepark!

The popularity of skating is on an uprise, and new skaters are constantly joining the trend. Out of 97 teenagers in Fairview, 96.9% said that Fairview should build a public skatepark, and 72.2% said that they would go to a skatepark in Fairview. One respondent said that skating is a “healthy and popular activity that people love.”

Many people believe that a public skatepark would be a great way to encourage adolescents to get active. Another stated, “There’s a large number of people in Fairview interested in skating that don’t have anything to practice with. Also there aren’t many skateparks near Fairview, meaning businesses could benefit from people in other cities coming to skate (in Fairview).”

A skatepark would open up new opportunities for skaters in Fairview and possibly attract new people to our city. Furthermore, a skatepark would bring people together, and it would make our community stronger.

SUBMITTED

Local teens are building their own ramps to fine tune their skating skills.

Because there are not any skate-parks within reasonable driving distance of Fairview, some of our own Fairview High students have taken matters into their own hands. Many members of Fairiew’s skate community have taken their time to build ramps, boxes and a quarter pipe. Some have purchased grind rails. They load up all of their equipment and meet up in different places around Fairview. They truly have built their own mobile skatepark. This exemplifies how badly the Fairview skate community wants a skatepark, and it proves a skatepark would be used.

As of now, there is no place for teenagers to skate. This has led to many people skating on the roads, sidewalks or parking lots which is a safety concern. If there was a skatepark, skaters would have a much safer public space to do what they love.

A skatepark would be a great addition to Fairview, and many citizens hope to make this idea a reality.

Larry Woody/Wilson Post

Camo makes turkey hunters invisible.

Turkey hunters should tread cautiously, think safety first all season

LARRY WOODY

larrywoody@gmail.com

Turkey season is drawing to a close soon, but hunters are advised to always proceed with caution.

Turkey hunting presents some unique safety challenges, and an accident is just one careless second away.

Unlike deer hunters, which are required to wear florescent orange hats and vests to make themselves highly visible, it’s just the opposite for turkey hunters. They dress from head to toe in camo, including face masks and gloves, making them virtually invisible to other hunters.

On top of that, they use calls to mimic the sounds of turkeys, which can attract other hunters.

One morning I was sitting in a fence corner calling, when I detected movement in an adjacent field. It was another hunter, slipping toward me, gun at the ready.

I ducked behind a tree and – keeping the tree between me and the other hunter – quickly and quietly slipped away.

I later learned that was the wrong thing to do.

In such a situation, never stand up, wave or make any sudden movement. Instead, shout at the other hunter and make sure he hears you and sees you before making the slightest movement. It may ruin your hunt, but it beats getting shot.

If someone thinks he’s stalking a yelping turkey, then suddenly detects a flicker of movement precisely where the yelping is coming from, he may have an extremely itchy trigger finger.

Never wear springtime “turkey colors” – red, white and blue. Those are the glowing hues of a gobbler’s head, and a flash of color could draw fire.

Obviously, there is no excuse for shooting at a flicker of movement or a flash of color. Only bearded turkeys are legal, and in order to detect a beard, the bird would have to be in clear view and positively identified.

But common sense sometimes goes out the window in an adrenaline-juiced moment of excitement.

The situation becomes more precarious every season as available public hunting land shrinks and more hunters are attracted to the sport. More hunters squeezed onto less land creates increased potential for an accident.

Wildlife Management Areas provide wide spaces and good hunting, but they require considerably more preparation and travel than does hunting private land – and also tend to be congested in the more accessible areas.

The solution to hunting safety is simple: always make sure of your target before you shoot. A spit-second of carelessness can result in a lifetime of remorse.

Can a Will Be Contested?

Your last will is designed to express your wishes after leaving your family behind.

Given its importance and long-lasting impact, experts recommend that you consider every detail, including how your belongings are distributed, who controls your finances and which family members are included in your final plans.

When creating the document, it's essential to ensure it's ironclad. There are specific circumstances that may result in someone contesting its validity.

Fortunately, your desires can't be contested simply because someone is unsatisfied with its terms. However, most states recognize a few legal reasons that can land your last wishes in a courtroom. If a contest is successful, not only is the questionable provision corrected, but the entire estate is also managed as if the document never existed.

Since state laws can vary, it's imperative to work with a law expert to ensure your desires are honored. Here are a few reasons the document may be considered void.

THE WILL IS SIGNED INCORRECTLY

One of the most significant reasons a will is refused is due to improper signatures after its creation. This can be a common occurrence, especially if there is tension within the family. First, the testator, or person leaving the document, must sign the form with a certain number of witnesses present. In most cases, both parties must be in the same room and perform the signing while everyone is watching.

THE TESTATOR LACKED CAPACITY

The term testamentary capacity refers to a testator understanding the nature and worth of their assets and who should rightfully inherit the assets.

This clause typically comes into effect if a will creator faces dementia or another mind-inhibiting disease while the document is being formed.

If the will is contested for this reason, many cases end with doctor testimony's relating to the patient's state of health.

THE TESTATOR WAS WRONGFULLY INFLUENCED

Another reason to create a will and testament while you're healthy is that being unduly influenced while your mind isn't sharp can cause significant issues for those you are leaving behind.

If it is deemed that a testator was wrongfully influenced to pass on their possessions to undeserving parties, judgment may approve the contest.

US says it will share AstraZeneca vaccines with world after reviews

By Zeke Miller
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. will begin sharing its entire stock of AstraZeneca COVID-19 vaccines with the world once it clears federal safety reviews, the White House said Monday, with as many as 60 million doses expected to be available for export in the coming months.

The move greatly expands on the Biden administration’s action last month to share about 4 million doses of the vaccine with Mexico and Canada. The AstraZeneca vaccine is widely in use around the world but has not yet been authorized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

The White House is increasingly feeling assured about the supply of the three vaccines being administered in the U.S., particularly following the restart of the single-dose Johnson & Johnson shot over the weekend. The U.S. has also been under mounting pressure in recent weeks to share more of its vaccine supply with the world, as countries like India experience devastating surges of the virus and others struggle to access doses needed to protect their most vulnerable populations.

“Given the strong portfolio of vaccines that the U.S. already has and that have been authorized by the FDA, and given that the AstraZeneca vaccine is not authorized for use in the U.S., we do not need to use the AstraZeneca vaccine here during the next several months,” said White House COVID-19 coordinator Jeff Zients. “Therefore the U.S. is looking at options to share the AstraZeneca doses with other countries as they become available.”

More than 3 million people worldwide have died of COVID-19, including more than 572,000 in the U.S. The U.S. has vaccinated more than 53% of its adult population with at least one dose of its three authorized vaccines from Pfizer, Moderna and J&J, and it expects to have enough supply for its entire population by early summer.

About 10 million doses of AstraZeneca vaccine have been produced but have yet to pass review by the FDA to “meet its expectations for product quality,” Zients said, noting the U.S. regulator is recognized as the “gold standard” for safety around the world. That process could be completed in the next several weeks. About 50 million more doses are in various stages of production and could be available to ship in May and June pending FDA sign-off.

The U.S. has yet to finalize where the AstraZeneca doses will go, Zients said. Neighbors Mexico and Canada have asked the Biden administration to share more doses, while dozens of other countries are looking to access supplies of the vaccine.

“We’re in the planning process at this point in time,” said White House press secretary Jen Psaki, when asked where the doses would go.

The AstraZeneca doses will be donated by the U.S. government, which has contracted with the company for a total of 300 million doses — though the company has faced production issues.

The administration’s move to share vaccines drew praise from nongovernmental aid groups, who encouraged the White House to develop plans to share even more doses.

“The Biden administration’s decision to begin sharing AstraZeneca vaccines is welcome news and an important first step towards the US sharing more of its massive vaccine stockpile,” said Tom Hart, acting CEO at The ONE Campaign.

Doctors plead for help as health system breaks

By Sheikh Saaliq
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI — Dr. Gautam Singh dreads the daily advent of the ventilator beeps, signaling that oxygen levels are critically low, and hearing his desperately ill patients start gasping for air in the New Delhi emergency ward where he works.

Like other doctors across India, which on Monday set another record for new coronavirus infections for a fifth day in a row at more than 350,000, the cardiologist has taken to begging and borrowing cylinders of oxygen just to keep patients alive for one more day.

On Sunday evening, when the oxygen supplies of other nearby hospitals were also near empty, the desperate 43-year-old took to social media, posting an impassioned video plea on Twitter.

“Please send oxygen to us,” he said in a choked voice. “My patients are dying.”

India was initially seen as a success story in weathering the pandemic, but the virus is now racing through its population of nearly 1.4 billion, and systems are beginning to collapse.

SOS messages like the one Singh sent reveal the extent of the panic.

In addition to oxygen running out, intensive care units are operating at full capacity and nearly all ventilators are in use. As the death toll mounts, the night skies in some Indian cities glow from the funeral pyres, as crematories are overwhelmed and bodies are burned in the open air.

On Monday, the country reported 2,812 more deaths, with roughly 117 Indians succumbing to the disease every hour — and experts say even those figures are probably an undercount. The new infections brought India’s total to more than 17.3 million, behind only the United States.

RAFIQ MAQBOOL

People queue up for COVID-19 vaccine in Mumbai, India, on Monday. New infections are rising faster in India than any other place in the world, stunning authorities and capsizing its fragile health system.

The deepening crisis stands in contrast to the improving picture in wealthier nations like the U.S., Britain and Israel, which have vaccinated relatively large shares of their population and have seen deaths and infections plummet since winter. India has four times the population of the U.S. but on Monday had 11 times as many new infections.

Doctors like Singh are on the front lines, trying to get the supplies they need to keep their patients alive.

Singh received 20 oxygen cylinders on Monday, only enough to enable the hospital to limp through the day until the ventilators start sending out their warning beeps again.

“I feel helpless because my patients are surviving hour to hour,” Singh said in a telephone interview. “I will beg again and hope someone sends oxygen that will keep my patients alive for just another day.”

Experts warn it is likely to get worse.

Krishna Udayakumar, founding director of the Duke Global Health Innovation Center at Duke University, said it would be impossible for the country to keep up over the coming days as things stand.

“The situation in India is tragic and likely to get worse for some weeks to months,” he said, adding that a “concerted, global effort to help India at this time of crisis” is desperately needed.

The U.S. said Monday that it is working to relieve the suffering in India by supplying oxygen, diagnostic tests, treatments, ventilators and protective gear.

Help and support were also offered from archrival Pakistan, which said it could provide relief including ventilators, oxygen supply kits, digital X-ray machines, protective equipment and related items.

But many say the aid is too late — the breakdown a stark failure for a country that boasted of being a model for other developing nations.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

- Yikes!: An unnamed man emerged with his groceries from an Albertson’s supermarket in Las Cruces, New Mexico, on March 28, to find that his car had been overtaken by a swarm of an estimated 15,000 honeybees, according to the Las Cruces Fire Department. The man, who had borrowed the car, had left the back window down during his 10-minute trip inside the store, and the bees took up residence in the back seat. The New York Times reported he called 911, and responding firefighters turned to Jesse Johnson, 37, an off-duty firefighter who keeps bees as a hobby. Johnson brought an empty hive box treated with lemon-grass oil (“It really mimics the scent of the queen,” he said) and lured the swarm out of the car. “I’ll do anything to keep people from killing bees,” Johnson said.

- Cliche Come to Life: Around 4:15 a.m. on March 24, an unidentified resident of Laurium, Michigan, woke to find a gun pointed at his head, WLUC-TV reported. Laurium Police said Warren Meyers, 52, of Calumet, Michigan, allegedly demanded the homeowner give him his two cats. The “cat burglar” left with one cat and was later apprehended, along with the gun he used, said authorities. He was arraigned on March 29 in Houghton County Court; the fate of the stolen cat is unknown. (4-27)

LEGAL NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to its existing Annual Review Mechanism tariff, Atmos Energy Corporation (the Company) filed a Petition with the Tennessee Public Utility Commission (TPUC) on February 1, 2021 in Docket 21-00019, proposing to change its rates for natural gas service now in effect. The rates proposed by the Company are subject to approval by the TPUC. The TPUC may adopt, reject, increase or decrease any of the proposed rates in part or in whole. A complete copy of the proposed rate changes and the reasons for them are on file with the TPUC and are available for public inspection. A complete copy is also available in the Company's local offices. The Company has requested this change in rates in accordance with the procedures approved in its Annual Review Mechanism tariff. The predicted impact of the proposed changes on the average residential customer is an increase of approximately $ 40.51 per year. The predicted impact of the proposed changes on the average small commercial class customer is an increase of approximately $180.74 per year. The matter is set for hearing May 10th, 2021, beginning at 9:00 a.m. or as soon thereafter as it may be heard. Due to COVID-19, it is yet to be determined whether the hearing be conducted by video-teleconference on in person in the TPUC's Hearing Room on the ground floor of the Andrew Jackson State Office Building, 500 Deaderick Street, Nashville, Tennessee. Public Notice of the final date, time, and manner of the hearing will be posted on the TPUC webpage on or about May 3, 2021. MANAGEMENT AGENCY
Proposed Flood Hazard
Determinations for Rutherford County, Tennessee and Incorporated Areas
The Department of Homeland Security's Federal Emergency Management Agency has issued a preliminary Flood Insurance Rate Map (FIRM), and where applicable, Flood Insurance Study (FIS) report, reflecting proposed flood hazard determinations within Rutherford County and Incorporated Areas. These flood hazard determinations may include the addition or modification of Base Flood Elevations, base flood depths, Special Flood Hazard Area boundaries or zone designations, or the regulatory floodway. Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed flood hazard determinations shown on the preliminary FIRM and/or FIS report for Rutherford County and Incorporated Areas. These flood hazard determinations are the basis for the floodplain management measures that your community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program. However, before these determinations are effective for floodplain management purposes, you will be provided an opportunity to appeal the proposed information. For information on the statutory 90-day period provided for appeals, as well as a complete listing of the communities affected and the locations where copies of the FIRM are available for review, please visit FEMA's website at www.floodmap

LEGAL NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to its existing Annual Review Mechanism tariff, Atmos Energy Corporation (the Company) filed a Petition with the Tennessee Public Utility Commission (TPUC) on February 1, 2021 in Docket 21-00019, proposing to change its rates for natural gas service now in effect. The rates proposed by the Company are subject to approval by the TPUC. The TPUC may adopt, reject, increase or decrease any of the proposed rates in part or in whole. A complete copy of the proposed rate changes and the reasons for them are on file with the TPUC and are available for public inspection. A complete copy is also available in the Company's local offices. The Company has requested this change in rates in accordance with the procedures approved in its Annual Review Mechanism tariff. The predicted impact of the proposed changes on the average residential customer is an increase of approximately $ 40.51 per year. The predicted impact of the proposed changes on the average small commercial class customer is an increase of approximately $180.74 per year. The matter is set for hearing May 10th, 2021, beginning at 9:00 a.m. or as soon thereafter as it may be heard. Due to COVID-19, it is yet to be determined whether the hearing be conducted by video-teleconference on in person in the TPUC's Hearing Room on the ground floor of the Andrew Jackson State Office Building, 500 Deaderick Street, Nashville, Tennessee. Public Notice of the final date, time, and manner of the hearing will be posted on the TPUC webpage on or about May 3, 2021. Biden quickly pushes change

By JONATHAN LEMIRE and CALVIN WOODWARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The card tucked in President Joe Biden's right jacket pocket must weigh a ton. You can see the weight of it on his face when he digs it out, squints and ever-so-slowly reads aloud the latest tally of COVID-19 dead. Sometimes he'll stumble on a digit — after all, flubs come with the man. But the message is always clear: The toll of the virus weighs on him constantly, a millstone that helps explain why the typically garrulous politician with the megawatt smile has often seemed downright dour.

For any new leader, a lingering pandemic that has killed more than a half-million citizens would be plenty for a first 100 days. But it has been far from the sole preoccupation for the now 78-year-old Biden.

The oldest person ever elected president is tugging the United States in many new directions at once, right down to its literal foundations — the concrete of its neglected bridges — as well as the racial inequities and partisan poisons tearing at the civil society. Add to that list: a call for dramatic action to combat climate change.

He's doing it without the abrasive noise of the last president or the charisma of the last two. Biden's spontaneity, once a hallmark and sometimes a headache, is rarely seen. Some say he is a leader for this time: more action, less talk and something for the history books.

"This has been a really terrible year," said Matt Delmont, who teaches civil rights history at Dartmouth College in New Hampshire.

"There's so much. We want a new president to be a light forward. From that perspective, it makes sense that you want to get out of the box fast."

Biden "sees the virtue of going bigger and bolder," Delmont said. "It so strongly echoes FDR."

Few would have bet Joe Biden would ever be uttered in the same breath as Franklin D. Roosevelt. It's too soon to know whether he deserves to be.

But the scope of what Biden wants to do would — if he succeeds — put him in the company of that New Deal president, whose burst of consequential actions set the 100-day marker by which all successors have been informally measured since.

A reported 4,380 people in the U.S. died from the virus on the day Biden became president on Jan. 20. COVID-19 is killing about 700 people a day now. For Biden, much of the struggle is about "getting people some peace of mind so they can go to bed at night and not stare at the ceiling."

It's not all been smooth. Biden has struggled to change course on immigration practices he railed against in the campaign. He's earned rare rebukes from some Democrats and shown that a president's famously empathetic nature does not necessarily mean empathetic treatment of the world's dispossessed.

Already, Biden has achieved a pandemic relief package of historic breadth and taken executive actions to wrestle the country away from the legacy and agitations of President Donald Trump.

The U.S. has pivoted on the environment. The government has created payments that independent analysts say should halve child poverty in a year. It has embraced international alliances Trump shunned. It has elevated the health insurance program Trump and fellow Republicans tried to kill, making the Affordable Care Act more affordable than it ever was under President Barack Obama.

When Trump won the 2016 election, Obama said the day after that he saw something very American in the outcome, as unhappy as he was about the result. "The path that this country has taken has never been a straight line," Obama said. "We zig and we zag."

It's Biden's zigzag now. The temperature is lower. The drama is less. And the persona is fundamentally different.

"He ran as the antithesis of Trump — empathetic, decent and experienced, and he is delivering on that promise," said former Obama adviser David Axelrod.

Biden's first months in office were, in many ways, a rejection of what came before.

He evoked his bipartisan deal-making track record of 36 years in the Senate as the example he sought to bring back, though there's been little bipartisanship in what he's achieved as president.

Gone are the out-of-control news conferences. Gone are the sudden firings and impulsive policy declarations — both often in the form of a tweet — of the Trump years. Twitter is irrelevant for Biden's presidential musings; he has yet to tweet by his own hand and what appears under his name is White House boilerplate.

Americans are getting something more organized and methodical. Like the index card in his suit jacket pocket. Printed in black and white, it shows his schedule, the daily numbers of vaccine doses administered, the previous day's virus deaths, daily hospitalizations and the cumulative death toll.

It lists daily numbers of troops killed and wounded in war, a tally he started keeping in his pocket years ago, through the wars that spanned his two-term vice presidency. He says he will bring the last U.S. troops home from Afghanistan on Sept. 11, the 20th anniversary of the terrorist attacks that sparked America's longest war.

Biden has appeared in public far less than his predecessors and given the public fewer set pieces. That's in part due to COVID-19 safety concerns, but also because of a sense among his advisers that people were simply worn out from four years of the Trump show.

Biden wanted to occupy less of the American consciousness than did Trump, who dominated the discourse like no one else had done, while achieving almost nothing legislatively in his 100-day debut. The new president turned virus briefings over to the scientists and administration officials and didn't gag them.
